TALENT WEEK 2013-'14

INTRODUCTION:

In Aurora, we believe that not only education but also inner talent is important; so we organize a Talent Week every year as a platform to find and appreciate various talents among the students. This year the platform was larger by allowing students to come up with various talents they have and had a competition on those areas! This is what made this year's Talent Week successful by covering all the areas of literary and cultural events. The two weeklong events had active participation from students of various streams, exposing their innate talents. The competitions were presided over by different faculty and had different Captain in charges in assistance, without whom, the events wouldn't have been so successful. Organized by the 'Literary & Cultural Committee', Talent Week was an example of how the entire college unites for an in house fest and how Aurorians are competitive among themselves to excel in their own areas of expertise.

Objective:

The main objective itself is to identify talent by giving Aurorians an in house opportunity and this year's initiative of asking students to come up with their talent made it more of a talent recognizing event than a competition. By adopting such a method, we were able to find different scales of talents. By participating in such college level events, students can overcome their fears and will get a boost to participate in higher levels; this stay as a confidence factor even at professional levels in the future. This is what, Aurora aims, the overall development of students, crafting them in such a way that, they can stand confidently in any stage once they are out of the college, for that, these kind of events act as a budding seed! The students who proved their mettle in Talent Week are further considered by the college for inter-college, state and national level events in their fields of adeptness. In addition to recognizing the winners with prizes, credit points are awarded to every participant, with the winner getting more, which will be very useful in the nomination for, 'Star of Aurora' which will be given on Apoorva – the college day every year.

Execution:

The Talent Week is executed under the team of Literary & Cultural Committee, who first asked class captains to get a list of talents by every student of their class. This was an attempt to cover all the sections of talents possessed by each and every student in the college. The prime motive of Talent Week itself was all round participation from the college. Once the list of events was made, schedule was prepared. The team sat together and made the schedule considering the intersection time for both morning and afternoon classes and holidays. After the schedule preparation, captains were allocated duties under respective faculties for every event. They were asked to meet the faculty incharge and take up the required work. Simultaneously, posters of motivation, schedule and information regarding Talent Week were designed and pasted all over the college. Captains were informed to motivate their classmates to participate in events and describe about its prominence. In addition to it, a daily basis announcement was done by the team to each and every class informing about the event of following day. From the start itself, the plan of action was discussed in the Captains' Meetings taking suggestions from everyone. Evaluation sheets for all the events were made for judging.

On the day of event, duty allocated Captain was asked to be at the Venue half an hour before the event time; Spot registration counters were held at both the blocks. The Captain coordinator used to check the requirements for the events like mike set or sound system, if any. The judges who come at the time of event were given evaluation sheets and were assisted by Captain Coordinators. The Talent Week incharge monitored the entire event filling up any requirement, allocating rooms in case of unavailability and even organizing events. The topics for specified competitions were notified at the notice board.
